- 0 704 A VILLAGE FÊTE<sup>A</sup>

The scene of merriment is in front of a large public-house, from the window of which flies a flag with a figure of a warrior on it. A numerous assemblage of peasantry extends over the greater part of the foreground; amongst them, and about the centre of the picture, is an old man, mounted on a tub, placed by the side of a tree, playing on a bagpipe, and a couple dancing to the music. On the right side and front is a company of seven persons at a table, on which are refreshments; one of them is cutting a slice of ham, and another merry fellow is endeavouring to embrace a young woman. In the opposite side is a variety of culinary and other objects lying on the ground; and at some distance from these is a woman, leading off a drunken man through a doorway

706 A YOUNG WOMAN ("Hendrikje Stoffels"), rising up in bed, putting the curtains back with her hand, and looking with fixed attention at some object in her room: her light hair is partly concealed by a cap richly worked in gold. The figure is of the size of life, and is so close a resemblance of Nature both in colour and expression as to be almost illusion

715 PORTRAIT OF MRS. BALDWIN, née Maltass, great aunt of the late Dean Burgon*NugbyFrom Strawberry Hill*

"The extraordinary beauty of this lady created a great sensation both at Vienna and in London, procured for her attentions from the Prince of Wales, afterwards George IV., and elicited even from Dr. Johnson a burst of clumsy amorousness."

"In all the pride of youth and beauty," writes her great nephew to the 'Gentleman's Magazine' "she was brought before the aged and infirm sage whose curiosity had been aroused by the story of her foreign birth, and residence in distant lands. Johnson asked her what was the colour of the Abyssinians? Mrs. Baldwin replied that she did not know. 'But what colour do you think they are?' persisted the author of 'Rasselas,' After some hesitation, and renewed professions of utter ignorance on the subject, Mrs. Baldwin said that she supposed they were brown. The doctor next said he should like to give her a kiss; and the husband's permission having been obtained, a kiss was formally inflicted. Mrs. Baldwin could never forget the forbidding exterior of her Platonic admirer, and the servile adulation of his future biographer."—Goulbourn's 'Life of Dean Burgon.'
